Module Outline:

Component 1 (Kant's Groundwork):

This component will offer a close reading of one of Immanuel Kant's moral writings, the Grounding for the Metaphysics of Morals. In particular, this component will examine Kant's pure moral philosophy; Kant's concern with grounding morality on experience and his decision to ground morality on practical reason; the distinction between categorical and hypothetical imperatives; autonomy or self-legislation; and criticisms of the formalism and universality of Kantian morality.

Recommended Reading List:

The complete reading list, including primary and secondary literature, will be finalized at the beginning of the term. Our central text is:

- Immanuel Kant, Grounding for the Metaphysics of Morals: On a Supposed Right to Lie Because of Philanthropic Concerns, trans. James W. Ellington, Third Edition (Indianapolis/Cambridge: Hackett Publishing Company, Inc.), 1993.

Component 2 (Arendt's The Human Condition):

This component will offer a close reading of one of Hannah Arendt's political texts, The Human Condition. In particular, this component will analyze Arendt's conception of the vita activa (the active life of labor, work, speech and action); the artificial conditions humans create in order to live on earth and to engage in political activities; and the historical-political problem of world-alienation and earth-alienation. We will question whether or not current political events reflect a continuation of world- and earth-alienation (i.e., the abolishment of earthly distance through technological advancements and the desire to populate other planets, respectively).

Recommended Reading List:

The complete reading list, including primary and secondary literature, will be finalized at the beginning of the term. Our central text is:

- Hannah Arendt, The Human Condition (Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1958).

Assessments:

1 Exam (mid-term) 50% AND 1 Essay (end of module) 50%
